Sonier-Brinkerhoff Scandal. Correspondence of The Detroit Tribune

BATTLE CREEK, MAY 6, 1873. It has become a question with many whether to laugh at or deplore the circumstances recently brought to light in connection with the extraordinary free-love episode just enacted at this place. One of the most remarkable features of the case is that the has band of Mrs. Brinkerhoff, while friends and relatives urge him to break up the alliance between his wife and Squier, smiles at them, congratulates himself upon his good luck, and philosophizes himself into contentment, and that the wife of Mr. Squier, who_still remains at the east, has published a card, in which she states that between herself and her husband the separation was mutual, and that she, too, considers her present
